10 Ways to have a Safe Start of the School Year

1. Be sure your child knows his or her home phone number (including area code) and address, your work number, the number of another trusted adult, and how to use 911 for emergencies. Make sure your child has enough change to make a phone call or they carry a telephone calling card.
2. Plan a walking route to school or the bus stop. Choose the most direct way with the fewest street crossings and use intersections with crossing guards. Test the route with your child. Tell him or her to stay away from parks, vacant lots, fields, and other places where there aren't many people around.
3. Teach children -- whether walking, biking, or riding the bus to school -- to obey all traffic signals, signs, traffic officers, and safety patrols. Remind them to be extra careful in rainy, foggy, or snowy weather.
4. Make sure they walk to and from school with others -- a friend, neighbor, brother, sister.
5. When car-pooling, drop off and pick up children as close to school as possible. Don't leave until they have entered the schoolyard or building.
6. Teach your child never to talk to strangers or accept rides or gifts from strangers. Remember, a stranger is anyone you or your children doesn't know well or doesn't trust.
7. Set up rules for locking doors and windows, answering the door or telephone.
8. Make sure he or she checks in with you or a neighbor immediately after school.
9. Agree on rules for inviting friends over and for going to a friend's house when no adult is home.
10. Take time to listen carefully to children's fears and feelings about people or places that scare them or make them feel uneasy. Tell them to trust their instincts. Take complaints about bullies and other concerns seriously

Why Did You Say That?

Do you know where these common expressions come from?

- Barking up the wrong tree originated with hunting dogs that would bark at the bottom of a tree where they mistakenly thought their quarry was hiding.
- When you can't hold a candle to someone, you can't measure up. This comes from the practice of apprentices holding a candle so their masters could see what they were doing. If an apprentice couldn't even do that, he was obviously inferior.
- When tempers get out of control & you fly off the handle, you're like a loose axe head that flies off its handle.
- Stealing one's thunder: this phrase originated in 1709 when John Dennis, an English playwright, invented a new method of simulating the sound of thunder on stage that used metal balls rolling around in wooden troughs. Dennis's play was not successful but his technique was, and when he realized it was being used in a later production of Macbeth, he purportedly accused the director of stealing his thunder.
- A flash in the pan, something with great promise that doesn't come to fruition, dates back to Gold Rush days. A miner might see a flash in his pan that didn't turn out to be gold. Similarly, something doesn't pan out when it doesn't meet expectations.

People cannot do any work that will make them right with God.
Romans 4:5

An old man was running a fairground tent. Upon the tent hung a sign that read: "$50—learn to be a mind reader."

A teenager who was passing by was intrigued. He entered the tent and decided to try his luck.

"OK, here we go," said the old man as he handed the boy a water hose. "I want you to hold this hose and look in the end."

"What for?" asked the teenager.

"It's all part of teaching you to become a mind reader," the old man said.

Reluctantly, the teen took up the garden hose and peered into the end. He saw nothing. Only darkness. Then suddenly, the old man turned on the tap and water came gushing out all over the young man's face.

"I knew you were going to do something like that!" the teenager yelled, while water dripped from his face.

"That'll be $50 then," the old man said.
